

Greeters and Auxiliary Members Arrive Here for 2 Day Meeting; Flags Fly

Prominent Hotelmen Open First Quarterly Conference At 7 O'clock Tonight.

Flags are flying at full staff today, and will remain so tomorrow for two reasons.

The first was in observance of the 61st anniversary of the surrender of General Robert E. Lee to General Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Court House, Virginia, April 9, 1865.

The second reason for flying the American flag at full staff is to signify the cordial welcome extended to Pennsylvania Charter, number forty-one, Hotel Greeters of America, and members of the Ladies' Auxiliary. At seven o'clock this evening, the Greeters open a two-day convention in Gettysburg.

A bright April sun greeted the vanguard of visitors as they arrived in the battlefield town this morning. Some few came with the break of day, others struggled in at noon, while others arrived late this afternoon, but in ample time to attend the board of governors' meeting at seven o'clock at the Hotel Gettysburg.

Jovial and Pleasant
A jovial, pleasant, entertaining group of delegates, they are, the members of the state charter and the spirit of "hail fellows well met" gives evidence of a successful conference and an enjoyable stay in Gettysburg.

Local Greeters were on hand to welcome the delegates, representative of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. From nearly every large hotel in the state, one or more delegates have come, ready to create a favorable impression of Gettysburg, long ago known as the "greatest little city in the world."

Merchants, guides, townspeople and transients were eager to show marked respect and genial hospitality to and for the visiting conventioners. They have come to transact official business in an official way, but they have also come to make merry, to relieve their mind of business worries for two days and to see how Gettysburg receives its tourist visitors.

Early this morning, merchants were hanging the Red, White and Blue in commemoration of the two events. While the surrender of Lee to Grant had a direct bearing on the future world's history and is perhaps the major topic of the two issues, the welcome of the Greeters is uppermost in the minds of Gettysburgians.

Official Welcome
Burgess C. A. Heiges has officially extended a welcome. The guides have offered their services and Saturday afternoon will escort the visitors over the 2500 acre battlefield. The managers of the three larger hotels have completed plans for the entertainment of their guests. These features will embrace a smoker, theatre party, luncheon, dinner and dance.

Hotelmen of Philadelphia are not affiliated with Charter 41, but representatives of the larger hotels of the Quaker City are guests of the local Greeters. Washington is represented by Russell E. Conn, manager of the Lee House, and one of the most widely known hotelmen in the East.

Official representatives of the Greeters Magazine arrived shortly after noon.

Noted Humorist Here
Strickland Gillilan, nationally known humorist, was expected at five o'clock this afternoon.

Warren B. Free, manager of the Molly Pitcher Hotel, Carlisle, and president of the charter, motored to Gettysburg this morning.

CHURCH ADDS 58 NEW MEMBERS

Annual Report, to be Submitted to Carlisle Presbytery, Shows; Seek Conewago Pastor.

Fifty-eight new members were enrolled in the Presbyterian church here, according to a report prepared by Rev. W. C. Robinson, pastor, for the year ending March 31. Communicant members were listed at 410; resident members at 385.

$5,682 was contributed to congregational expenses, the report shows, with $2,105 contributed to Presbyterian Boards for missionary purposes. Miscellaneous benevolences were announced at $100. The report will be presented to the Carlisle Presbytery at Paxtang, near Harrisburg, next Monday and Tuesday by Rev. Robinson and Elder S. G. Bigham.

One of the principal items of local interest to be transacted at the spring meeting of Presbyterian pastors will be the securing of a pastor or a stated supply for the Great Conewago Presbyterian church.

"We do not have an easy problem keeping a minister at Great Conewago," said Mr. Robinson, moderator of the local church, "but I am absolutely opposed to allowing this old historic church to die. I believe that the Lord still has a mission for it and I will do all I can to help it accomplish His mission in the Hunterstown community."

The Women's Missionary Society of the Gettysburg church voted $100 last Monday to help pay the salary of a man at Hunterstown this summer.

Highway Worker Transferred Here

H. M. Capper, until recently with the Allentown district office, has been transferred to the Gettysburg office of the state highway department as assistant engineer in charge of township road work. He succeeds R. W. Lowry, who has been promoted to the position of assistant engineer in charge of construction.

Special Meeting Of Council Will Be Held Tonight

A special adjourned meeting of the borough council will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock at the engine house. The meeting was called by President P. C. Stock for three reasons, none of which includes the matter of a second policeman to fill the vacancy caused by the refusal of M. V. Fugitt to accept the position to which he was elected on Monday evening.

The reasons given for the special meeting tonight are to contract for the crushing of some stone owned by the borough, a financial question relative to the paving of West Middle street and discussion of the opening of an alley east of North Stratton street.

J. P. OYLER OUT FOR RE-ELECTION

Local Man Seeks Return to Chairmanship of Republican County Committee; Circulate Petitions.

J. Price Oyler, York street, today announced his candidacy for re-election as chairman of the Adams County Republican Committee at the spring primary, May 18. A chairman and all members of the Republican county committee will be chosen.

Nominating petitions on behalf of Mr. Oyler's candidacy are in circulation and are expected to be filed with the county commissioners late this afternoon.

Letters announcing Mr. Oyler's candidacy have been sent to the various committeemen in the county, informing them of his intention of becoming a candidate for re-election, and asking their support. The letter says in part:

"In asking your support in the coming election, I promise that, if elected, I will continue to give the same careful and conscientious consideration to duty that I have endeavored to give on behalf of Republican candidates in the past. In this connection, I frankly acknowledge that much of the success of our joint endeavors in the past has come from your constant and unswerving loyalty. If elected, I hope that I may merit the same cooperation from the committeemen that has been my lot in the past."

Mr. Oyler was first elected county chairman by the committeemen at a special meeting called when R. C. Miller, Baltimore street, resigned to become postmaster of Gettysburg. Two years ago, the incumbent was re-elected.

The Democratic party in Adams county elects its committeemen at the primary. The committeemen then meet and elect a chairman. Robert D. Bream, Cashtown merchant, is the present chairman of the Democratic party.

2 COUNTY GIRLS BECOME SISTERS

Two former McSherrytown residents were received as Sisters of St. Joseph at Chestnut Hill convent, Philadelphia, at a reception held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. They were Misses Regina Bunty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bunty, and Annie Marshall. Miss Bunty received the name, Sister M. Vera Teresa, and Miss Marshall that of Sister M. Benedict Joseph.

There were 43 members of the novitiate in the class received, presenting a beautiful sight. They were attired as brides in elaborate white costumes, many of them beaded or adorned with jewels. About 100 priests were present. The reception lasted from 2:30 to 5 o'clock and was witnessed by members of the families and friends of those received. Each one in the class was permitted to invite six persons. Afterward the members of the families were permitted to be with the newly-received sisters until 6 p. m.

Among those present were the Rev. Matthew Scanlon, Bonneville; Mrs. T. C. Bunty and daughters, Misses Mary and Agnes, Mrs. Charles Bushey, Misses Marie Overbaugh and Catherine Klunk, McSherrytown. Mrs. Bunty remained to visit relatives in York, before returning to her home.

REPAIR HOLES IN CENTER SQUARE

Numerous deep holes in the macadam in Center Square were being repaired today by employees of the state highway department. The borough furnished the materials for the repairs and paid the state employees for their work.

OFFICER, SON OF LOCAL MAN FACES GAMBLING CHARGE

Captain Joseph Rice, York, Admits Slot Machines Were Used in Armory.

Captain Joseph Rice, commanding officer of the 28th Military Police Company, Pennsylvania National Guard, York, a son of the Rev. S. L. Rice, Steinwehr avenue, was held for court on charges of setting up and establishing gambling devices in the form of slot machines, when Alderman Jacob Stager, York, handed down a decision, Thursday, after holding the case under advisement for several days.

Alderman Stager stated that his decision was reached purely on the evidence which was presented at the hearing Monday evening, when at least a dozen witnesses testified that they had seen gambling devices in the form of slot machines and punch boards in the state armory, and several of whom declared on the witness stand that they had seen Rice remove money from the machines as well as working at the mechanism of one of the machines, after it had been playing winner for the youth that was operating it.

Rice Makes Statement
Captain Rice in a statement did not deny that gambling machines had been in operation at the armory, but shifted the responsibility for their being there upon the members of the canteen board of the company of which he is the commanding officer. When approached for the names of the members of the canteen board Captain Rice refused to furnish the names, stating that they are appointed by military officers and that their names will be disclosed in court.

"Unfortunate Notoriety"
In his statement Captain Rice asserted: "I want to give facts to offset the unfortunate notoriety which the case has brought to the 28th Military Police Company."

"I do not deny that slot machines were operated at the canteen. The machines were ordered by the canteen board of the company, which is charged with the conduct of the store. The canteen is operated for the benefit of members and guests when accompanied by members, and all the profits from the store are used to furnish the building and maintain it for the benefit of the members. The canteen is not open to the public generally and signs to that effect are posted on the doors. If outsiders got in and spent money in the store they were there against the rules of the company."

Was Skeptical
"While I looked upon the machines skeptically from the beginning, I did not order them out because the building, the canteen included, had passed satisfactorily both state and federal inspection. But as soon as criticism came to my ears, I at once ordered them out. The machines have not been in the store for more than a month."

"The armory is state property and the Military Police Company is a part of the army of the government. Each member is under oath to the state and federal government to give service in case of any internal or external trouble, and we are bound to be in readiness for action at all times."

"The company ranks high in the military organization. It is the only unit to take first place in camp for five consecutive years. There never has been a federal inspection that has not been classified as 'satisfactory.'"

AGED COUNTIAN DIES THURSDAY

Amalgam Harman, 79, well-known in both Adams and Cumberland counties, died at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Cletus Frost, Goodyear, at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning of arterio sclerosis, following an illness of thirteen weeks. He was a retired farmer, leaving agricultural pursuits in 1922 when he went to live with his daughter.

Mr. Harman, a son of the late John and Madeline Harman, Cumberland county, is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frost, Goodyear, and Mrs. Lemuel Beam, Gardner; one sister, Mrs. Caroline Weidner, who resides with Mrs. Frost, five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Funeral services Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Frost, Goodyear, the Rev. O. D. Coble, Lutheran minister, officiating. Interment at Bendersville.

TO REDEDICATE PINES' CHURCH

Special Service Planned For Sunday Afternoon at Historic Edifice in Straban Township.

St. Paul's Lutheran church, Straban township, near New Chester, known as "The Pines," will be re-dedicated at an appropriate service, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. J. Harold Little, Broadway, is pastor at "The Pines" in which charge also are Lutheran churches at Hampton and Heidersburg.

"The Pines" is one of the most historic churches in Adams county, tracing its history back to 1753. The present edifice is the third to house "The Pines" congregation, and was erected in 1863.

Few repairs had been made to the present church until last October when extensive improvements were begun and recently completed. The interior of the building has been completely renovated, and is an attractive place of worship.

Pastor Gives Memorial
Improvements include a mural painting, done by an experienced firm, and donated by the pastor, as a memorial to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Little, of Hanover. Other memorials and contributions have been given by various Sunday school classes, individuals and church organizations and include a new altar, altar table, altar cloths, papering and a new heating plant. The Ladies' Aid Society of the church is responsible for the furnace, which was installed at a cost of $500.

Detailed Program
Rev. Dr. A. R. Wentz, a member of the Lutheran Seminary faculty here, will deliver the sermon at the re-dedication service. The detailed program follows:

Invocation, hymn, opening service, solo, "Open the Gates," Miss Kathryn Winand; scripture lesson, prayer, hymn, re-dedication service, quartet, "Can It Be Done?" Emmert Colestock, Harvey Taughinbaugh, Kenneth Alwine and Harry Emlet; sermon, Doctor Wentz; offering, selection, solo, "My Task," Mr. Colestock; hymn and benediction.

Rev. Mr. Little is a graduate of Gettysburg Seminary. He began his pastorate at "The Pines" on June 1, 1924. There will be no preaching services at Heidersburg or Hampton on Sunday, it is announced.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Elker, Steinwehr avenue, announce the birth of a son, Thursday afternoon.

A son was born this morning to Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Eckert, Straban township.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Carbaugh, Gettysburg Route 4, announce the birth of an eight-pound daughter, Mary Edith, April 8.

Hugentugler Will Address Women At Republican Meeting

Arrangements have been completed for the public meeting to be held by the Republican Women's Club of Adams county in the court house, Saturday, April 10, at 4 p. m.

Because of the number of candidates who have indicated their intention to be present, this meeting promises to be one of unusual interest and importance to all voters, officers announce.

Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot will be one of the speakers, as will Mayor E. S. Hugentugler, of York, candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress from the York-Adams district, and possibly E. E. Beidleman, of Harrisburg, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, and others. Congressman Menges will also attend, it was learned late today.

All persons interested in the issues of the state and local elections are urged to be present.

LOCAL PLAYERS AT BLOOMSBURG

As guests of the Bloomsburg Rotary Club, the casts of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "The Potboiler," two recent Owl and Nightingale Dramatic Club successes, will go to Bloomsburg next Monday and Tuesday to present the two shows there for the benefit of the service club which is raising funds for a community playground.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate," one of the best Gettysburg College farces ever staged, will be given Monday and Tuesday evenings, with "The Potboiler," a screamingly funny comedy, with which the dramatic club won state honors, presented Tuesday afternoon.

Appearing at the three performances, between acts, will be the Gettysburg College quartet.

Final Rites For J. L. Taughinbaugh

Funeral services for J. L. Taughinbaugh, well known farmer and orchardist of Straban township, who died Monday, were held at the Presbyterian church, Hunterstown, Thursday afternoon. The services were in charge of the Rev. W. C. Robinson, Gettysburg, and the Rev. J. Harold Little, Gettysburg. Interment was in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Pallbearers were James Bell, Calvin Smith, E. W. Goldsborough, Frank Weaver, Harvey Brown and W. D. Brown.

NURSE ACCEPTS HOSPITAL POST

Miss Marian A. Bender, who has been a nurse at the Annie M. Warner Hospital for two years and nine months, has accepted the position as night supervisor at the Chambersburg Hospital. After spending a few days at her home in McConnellsburg, Miss Bender will take up her new duties on April 11.

FIRST STEP IN FORECLOSURE OF FARMS IS TAKEN

Attorneys For Trustee Have Writ of "Scieri Facias Sur Mortgage" Issued.

The initial step in foreclosure proceedings against the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company was taken today when William Hersh and Raymond F. Topper, attorneys for the trustee of the $100,000 mortgage on the five properties, instructed C. B. Yohe, prothonotary, to issue a writ of "scieri facias sur mortgage."

The Citizens' Trust Company, Baltimore street, is trustee of the mortgage on the properties in the up-county concern, which fell into the hands of the receiver in 1924.

In directing the issuance of a writ of scieri facias, the attorneys set forth that the company has indebtedness amounting to $119,170, representing the $100,000 mortgage, with unpaid interest since March 1, 1923.

Returned April 26
The writ of scieri facias is returnable April 26, after which an execution against the properties concerned will be issued and their sale ordered by the sheriff. The sale is expected to take place some time in May.

The farms passed from the hands of the receivers on April 1, when Judge D. P. McPherson set aside confirmation of a previous sale made by them on the ground that the farms could not be sold free of liens and encumbrances as advertised and announced on the day of the sale and as returned to court in the original confirmation.

Pending re-sale of the properties by Sheriff John C. Shealer, Grover C. Myers, a member of the board of trustees of the trust company, is serving as manager.

The Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company was incorporated in September, 1922, by J. L. Butt, Gettysburg, for $100,000. The Citizens' Trust Company became trustee of the $100,000 mortgage on the five valuable fruit and agricultural farms under which the bonds of the concern were issued.

Default in interest payments was given as the incentive for the trust company to foreclose on its mortgage, provision for such procedure being given in the articles of agreement under which the mortgage was taken.

DRY LEADERS ARE CHALLENGED

American Federation of Labor Representative Says Referendum Would Return Wines, Beer.

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, April 9.—A challenge to dry leaders to join in a movement for a nation wide referendum on light wine and beer was issued today before the Senate prohibition committee by spokesmen for the American Federation of Labor.

Appearing as a witness for the wetts and speaking as personal representative of President William Greene, of the federation, William Roberts told the committee that the "present uprising of those opposed to the Volstead act is a stable, solid movement."

"I sincerely believe that those who oppose light wines and beer realize that a referendum would declare in favor of a modification of the Volstead act," he said. "If this were not true why do they fight a referendum so strenuously?"

"The defenders of the Volstead act apparently prefer to see the people of our country seriously affected by vicious concoctions of liquor rather than to make it a temperance country by legalizing the manufacture of mild beer."

Mr. Roberts was the first witness for the wetts on the fifth day of the Senate hearing. The drys will present their side of prohibition next week.

Oiling Program Begins April 15

The oiling program of the state highway department in Adams, Franklin and York counties begins April 15 and ends June 15, it was announced today at the local district office. The stretches to be oiled will be announced later. The usual method of oiling only one side of a roadway at a time, and allowing that to dry before oil is placed on the other side, will be followed.

Ibanez' Torrent Feature Picture At Strand House

Cosmopolitan's much heralded production of "Ibanez' Torrent," with Ricardo Cortez, Greta Garbo, famous Swedish star, and a huge cast, is now playing at the Strand theatre. The new production, a vivid story of the life and triumphs of an opera star, was staged on a lavish scale, with a replica of the great Madrid throne room, operas in many great cities and other elaborate details. The costumes are gorgeous.

The two principals are surrounded by a notable cast that includes Gertrude Olmsted, Tully Marshall, Arthur Edmund Carew, Edward Connelly, Mack Swain, Lucien Littlefield and others. Monta Bell directed the new feature from the novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

The torrent scene is one of the most spectacular ever screened.

MAN DROPS 19 FLOORS TO DEATH

Efforts of Two Men and a Woman Fail to Save Hotel Guest; Fingers Burned Off Leg.

(By Associated Press.)

Chicago, April 9.—Two men, aided by a woman, risked their lives here today in a daring but unsuccessful attempt to rescue Leo J. Ainsworth, of Cincinnati, while he clung from a window ledge of his fire-swept hotel room three hundred feet above the sidewalk.

The men formed a human ladder from a window above the hanging man. But before a rescue could be effected Ainsworth dropped from the 19th floor, his burned fingers no longer able to hold his weight. He was instantly killed. Scores of pedestrians gazed in horror on the scene, powerless to aid.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Melville, of Chicago, and F. A. Guilleaume of New York, guests at the Morrison Hotel, tallest hostelry in the world, where the tragedy occurred, were the three who tried to save Ainsworth, a pioneer in radio manufacturing and broadcasting in Cincinnati.

Others who broke down the door of Ainsworth's room had to battle with the flames, but they reached the ledge too late.

"Tell my wife," Ainsworth began before he dropped, but the remainder was not heard by the two men on the ledge above him.

It is supposed Ainsworth fell asleep on the bed while smoking and awakened to find his room in flames.

BOARD ELECTS GRADE TEACHER

Miss Olive Orner, Gettysburg, a teacher in the Oxford township schools for the past eight years, was elected a teacher in the seventh and eighth grades here for next year at a special meeting of the school board Tuesday evening. Miss Orner, a normal school graduate, is highly recommended to the local board.

The seventh and eighth grades will be moved to the present high school building in the fall. A staff of four teachers will instruct the pupils in those two grades.

The board also has let the contract for the installation of 630 chairs in the auditorium of the new high school building. The chairs are to be installed by May 15.

It is planned to hold the commencement exercises this spring in the new high school building. June 3 has been set as the day for commencement exercises.

Rebekah Lodge Entertains Guests

With forty guests present from the Chambersburg Rebekah lodge, members of Mary Gettys Rebekah lodge, of Gettysburg, held a social at the Odd Fellows' lodge room, Center Square, Thursday evening. More than 125 persons were in attendance. Mrs. William Wentz, noble grand of the local Rebekahs, presided.

Entertainment consisted of readings by Mrs. Allen Deardorff, Baltimore street; vocal solos by little Miss Lena Hartzell, Lincoln Way East, and a minstrel sketch with Mrs. W. D. Gilbert, Miss Vergie Musser, Mrs. A. L. Sowers, Mrs. Curtis Klinefelter, Mrs. H. H. Thomas, Miss Mary Grove, Mrs. Ralph Wiernan, Mrs. Arthur Warman, Mrs. Lloyd Palmer, Mrs. Carl Oyler and Mrs. Henry Garlach taking part. The drill team of the Rebekah lodge, in charge of F. Mark Bream, also staged a drill.

It seems to me that if these things can be accomplished the company itself must be getting along very well and the members of the outfit satisfied.

"If young boys, or anyone outside the company, got in the canteen and operated the machines, it was without my knowledge."

At the hearing two of the youths, one 15 years old, the other 16, testified that Rice had been in the canteen when the 15-year-old youth was playing the machines, that he had removed some of the money from the machine during the same period.

president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, arrived with a party of Pittsburgh Greeters and Auxiliary members shortly after noon.

The convention opens at seven o'clock this evening with a board of governors meeting in the Hotel Gettysburg. At 9 o'clock Howard C. Mitinger, manager of the Hoffman Hotel, will be host at a smoker, while Hamilton D. Cherry, manager of the Majestic Theatre, will entertain the Auxiliary members at a theatre party.

Saturday noon, George W. Lynch will entertain the Greeters and Greeters at a luncheon at the Eagle Hotel. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the guides will escort the visitors over the battlefield.

At seven o'clock Saturday evening, Henry M. Scharf, manager of the Hotel Gettysburg, will entertain the delegates at a dinner and dance. The Pennsylvania Ramblers' orchestra will furnish music.

75 AT MEETING OF COLLEGE LEAGUE

Seventy-five members were present at the April tea of the Woman's League of Gettysburg College which was held Tuesday afternoon at Christ Lutheran church. The president, Mrs. Charles F. Sanders, conducted the opening service and the business session. During the latter four new members were received into the league. After the program which consisted of a vocal duet by Mrs. Mark K. Eckert and Mrs. Harmon Sisson, a piano and a vocal solo by Mrs. J. B. Baker, of Indiana, a "get acquainted" contest was enjoyed and refreshments served. The hostesses included Mrs. Marie A. Ziegler, Mrs. M. K. Eckert, Mrs. Mark Snyder, Mrs. Anna Reaser, Mrs. N. L. Minter, Mrs. Charles Pfeiffer, Mrs. Clyde Daley, Miss Laura Spangler, Mrs. Robert Lowrie, Mrs. E. A. Weaver and Mrs. E. C. Ott. The next tea will be held on May 4, at which time the various circles will give reports of the year's work.

Liquor Act Now Is Impossible, New York State

Washington, April 9.—Federal District Attorney Buckner, of New York, told the Senate liquor committee yesterday that enforcement of the prohibition law in New York is impossible unless officials are permitted to handle cases without trial by jury.

In addition to 85 additional judges the district attorney said that if the present system is to continue he needed many additional assistants and 1500 additional dry agents. Pressed for the annual cost of such an enforcement machine he said it would be $75,000,000 for the state of New York.

Telling of efforts to get evidence against agents suspected of having been bribed, the district attorney said he had told one offender he would not padlock his place if he would tell to whom he had paid protection.

"He refused to tell me," Buckner said. "He said, 'My life would be at stake, if I did tell you. I would not live 24 hours.' Finally he told me his last payment had been $5,000 to prevent a raid."

BELL IS HIGH SHOOTER HERE

Four Targets Elude His Aim at Mid-Week Shoot of Gettysburg Gun Club; 2-Day Event Soon.

The regular mid-week shoot of the Gettysburg Gun Club developed some keen shooting, with a number of ties, and was one of the best practice shoots of the spring season. Among the visitors were Curtis Krout, of Maryland Line, and Harry Edel, of Baltimore, both of whom made good scores, but the high award of the day went to Robert Bell, who was in his best form, only four targets eluding his aim. Bell also took high in the handicap event, breaking his twenty-five targets without a miss.

Following the shooting, the club held a business meeting to arrange for the two-day shoot here April 21 and 22. The trophy arrangement for the Susquehanna League will be merchandise, with two exceptions, the club providing two fine trophies for the high league shooter, and the high non-league contestant. All other trophies on the first day will be merchandise and local business men are invited to show their appreciation of the popularity of the sport by providing something from their shelves. M. E. Bair is in charge of this solicitation and announced that up to Thursday evening he has received no less than twenty merchandise prizes.

From reservations already made it is confidently expected that 150 gunners will be here for the two days' sport, among this number some of the best marksmen in this section.

The trophies for the second day, eleven in number, have been provided by the club, and will compare favorably with any given elsewhere. Richard Mumma, who recently purchased the Newsstand Drug Store, will have a special window with all the club trophies displayed within a few days.

Wednesday's scores: Bell, 96; Miller, 93; Bostwick, 93; Bair, 49; Gentzler, 46; Glenn Myers, 46; Krout, 46; Mitinger, 40; Edel, 40; Eiker, 40; Collins, 44.

Handicap scores: Bell, 25; Miller, 23; Gentzler, 22; Bostwick, 21; Mitinger, 21; Bair, 21; Edel, 21; Krout, 19, and Collins, 18.

"Chatterault died this morning," the King pursued. "He had been asking to see you, but when he was told that you had left Toulouse, he dictated a long confession of his misdeeds, which he sent to me together with this note of yours. He could not, he wrote, permit his heirs to enjoy your estates; he had not won them; he had really forfeited his own stakes, since he had broken the rules of play. He has left me to deliver judgment in the matter of his own lands passing into your possession. What do you say to it, Marcel?"

It was almost with reluctance that I took up that scrap of paper. It had been so fine and heroic a thing to have cast my wealth to the winds of heaven for love's sake, that on my soul I was loath to see myself master of more than Beaugency. Then a compromise suggested itself.

"The wager, sire," said I, "is one that I take shame in having entered upon; that shame made me eager to pay it, although fully conscious that I had not lost. But even now, I cannot, in any case, accept the forfeit Chatterault was willing to suffer. Shall we—shall we forget that the wager was ever laid?"

"The decision does you honour. It was what I had hoped from you. Go now, Marcel. I doubt me you are eager. When your love-sickness wanes a little we shall hope to see you at Court again."

I sighed. "Helas, sire, that would be never."

"So you said once before, monsieur. It is a foolish spirit upon trust the execution of this warrant that he will find the lady in the guard-room below, where she will be detained, pending my pleasure. Did she but know that it was your pleasure she has been waiting upon, I should tremble for your future when the five years expire."

CHAPTER XXII

We Unsaddle
Mademoiselle held the royal warrant of her father's banishment in her hand. She was pale, and her greeting of me had been timid. I stood before her, and by the door stood Rodenard, whom I had bidden attend me.

As I approached Lavedan that day, I had been taken with a great, an overwhelming shame at the bargain I had driven. I had pondered, and it had come to me that she had been right to suggest that in matters of love what is not freely given is not worth while to take. And out of my shame and that conclusion I had sprung a new resolve. So that nothing might weaken it, and lest, after all, the sight of Roxanne should bring me so to desire her that I might be tempted to override my purpose, I had deemed it well to have the restraint of a witness at our last interview. To this end had I bidden Ganymede follow me into the very salon.

She read the document to the very end, then her glance was raised timidly again to mine, and from me it shifted to Ganymede, stiff at his post by the door.

"This was the best that you could do, monsieur?" she asked at last.

"The very best, mademoiselle," I answered calmly. "I do not wish to magnify my service, but it was to withdraw and go my way. Yet not for all that resolve—not for a hundred such resolves—could I have gone thus. One kindly word, one kindly glance at least would I take to comfort me. I would tell her in plain words of my purpose, and she should see that there was still some good, some sense of honour in me, and thus should esteem me after I was gone.

"Ganymede," said I. "Monseigneur?"

"Bid the men mount."

At that she turned, wonder opening her eyes very wide, and her glance travelled from me to Rodenard with its unspoken question. But even as she looked at him he bowed and, turning to do my bidding, left the room.

"Why have you ordered your men to mount?" she asked at last.

"Because my business here is ended, and we are going."

"Going?" said she. Her eyes were lowered now, but a frown suggested their expression to me.

"Going whither?"

"Hence," I answered. "That for the moment is all that signifies." I paused to swallow something that hindered a clear utterance. Then, "Adieu!" said I, and I abruptly put forth my hand.

Her glance met mine fearlessly, it puzzled.

"Do you mean, monsieur, that you are leaving Lavedan—thus?"

"So that I leave, what signifies the manner of my going?"

"But—the trouble grew in her eye; her cheeks seemed to wax paler; than they had been—but I thought that—that we made a bargain."

"Sh! mademoiselle, I implore you," I cried. "I take shame at the memory of it. Almost as much shame as I take at the memory of that other bargain which first brought me to Lavedan. The shame of the former one I have wiped out—although, perchance, you think it not. I am wiping out the shame of the latter one. It was unworthy in me, mademoiselle, but I loved you so dearly that it seemed to me that no matter how I came by you, I should rest content if I but won you. I have since seen the error of it, the injustice of it. I will not take what is not freely given. And so, farewell."

"I see, I see," she murmured, and ignored the hand that I held out. "I am very glad of it, monsieur."

I withdrew my hand sharply. I took up my hat from the chair on which I had cast it. She might have spared me that, I thought. She need not have professed joy. At least she might have taken my hand and parted in kindness.

"Adieu, mademoiselle!" I said again, as stiffly as might be, and turned towards the door.

"Monsieur!" she called after me. I halted.

"Mademoiselle?"

She stood demurely, with eyes downcast and hands folded. "I shall be so lonely here."

I stood still. I seemed to stiffen. My heart gave a mad throb of hope, then seemed to stop. What did she mean? I faced her fully once more, and I doubt not, I was very pale. Yet lest vanity should befooled me, I dared not act upon suspicions. And so—

"True, mademoiselle," said I. "You will be lonely. I regret it."

As silence followed, I turned again to the door, and my hopes sank with each step in that direction.

"Monsieur!"

Her voice arrested me upon the very threshold.

"What shall a poor girl do with this great estate upon her hands? It will go to ruin without a man to govern it."

"You must not attempt the task. You must employ an intendant."

I caught something that sounded oddly like a sob. Could it be? Dieu! could it be, after all? Yet I would not presume. I half turned again, but her voice detained me. It came petulantly now.

"Monsieur de Bardelys, you have kept your promise nobly. Will you ask no payment?"

Her eyes were lifted for a second. Their blue depths seemed dim. Then they fell again.

"Oh, why will you not help me?" she burst out, to add more softly: "I shall never be happy without you!"

"You mean?" I gasped, retracing a step, and flinging my hat in a corner.

"That I love you, Marcel—that I want you!"

"And you can forgive—you can forgive?" I cried, as I caught her.

Her answer was a laugh that bespoke her scorn of everything—of everything save us two, of everything save our love. That and the point of her red lips was her answer. And if the temptation of those lips—But there! I grow indiscreet.

Still holding her, I raised my voice.

"Ganymede!" I called.

"Monseigneur?" came his answer through the open window.

"Bid those knaves dismount and unsaddle."

"That I love you, Marcel—that I want you!"

which to enter into matrimony; yet—like many follies—a fine one. Adieu, Marcel!"

"Adieu, sire!"

I had kissed his hands; I had poured forth my thanks; I had reached the door already, and he was in the act of turning to La Posse, when it came into my head to glance at the warrant he had given me. He noticed this and my sudden halt.

"Is aught amiss?" he asked.

"You—you have omitted something, sire," I ventured, and I returned to the table. "I am already so grateful that I hesitate to ask an additional favour. Yet it is but troubling you to add a few strokes of the pen, and it will not materially affect the sentence itself."

He glanced at me, and his brows drew together as he sought to guess my meaning.

"Well, man, what is it?" he demanded impatiently.

"It has occurred to me that this poor Vicomte, in a strange land, alone, among strange faces, missing the loved ones that for so many years he has seen daily by his side, will be pitifully lonely."

"The King's glance was lifted suddenly to my face. "Must I then banish his family as well?"

"All of it will not be necessary, Your Majesty."

For once his eyes lost their melancholy, and as hearty a burst of laughter as ever I heard from that poor, weary gentleman he vented them.

"Ciel! what a jester you are! Ah, but I shall miss you!" he cried, as, seizing the pen, he added the word I craved of him.

"Are you content at last?" he asked, returning the paper to me.

I glanced at it. The warrant now stipulated that Madame la Vicomtesse de Lavedan should bear her husband company in his exile.

"Sire, you are too good!" I murmured.

"Tell the officer to whom you en-that or the scaffold. Madame your mother had, unfortunately, seen the King before me, and she had prejudiced your father's case by admitting him to be a traitor. There was a moment when in view of that I was almost led to despair. I am glad, however, mademoiselle, that I was so fortunate as to persuade the King to just so much clemency."

"And for five years, then, I shall not see my parents." She sighed, and her distress was very touching.

"That need not be. Though they may not come to France, it still remains possible for you to visit them in Spain."

"True," she mused; "that will be something—will it not?"

"Assuredly something; under the circumstances, much."

She sighed again, and for a moment there was silence.

"Will you not sit, monsieur?" said she at last. She was very quiet to-day, this little maid—very quiet and very wondrously subdued.

"There is scarce the need," I answered softly; whereupon her eyes were raised to ask a hundred questions. "You are satisfied with my efforts, mademoiselle?" I inquired.

"Yes, I am satisfied, monsieur."

That was the end, I told myself, and involuntarily I also sighed. Still, I made no shift to go.

"You are satisfied that I—that I have fulfilled what I promised?"

Her eyes were again cast down, and she took a step in the direction of the window.

"But yes, your promise was to save my father from the scaffold. You have done so, and I make no doubt you have done as much to reduce the term of his banishment as lay within your power. Yes, monsieur, I am satisfied that your promise has been well fulfilled."

Helgho! The resolve that I had formed in coming whispered it in my ear that nothing remained but

WOMAN CONQUERS FEARS

Husband Delighted and Home Happier

St. Paul, Minn.—"Here is a little advice I would like to have you put in the papers," Mrs. Jack Lorberter of 704 Dellwood Place wrote to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company. "If young women want to keep their health and strength for the next thirty years of their lives, it is best to start in right now and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have tried the Compound myself and received fine results from its use." In describing her condition before taking the Compound, she writes, "I was afraid in my own house in broad daylight, I used to lock the doors and pull down the shades so that nobody could see me." One day a booklet advertising the Vegetable Compound was left on her porch and she read it through. In so doing, she found a letter from a woman whose condition was similar to her own. "I bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Lorberter continued, "and have had fine results. My condition made me a burden to my husband. Now I ask him, 'How is housekeeping?' and he says, 'It is just like being in Heaven!' Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?"

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

"The newspaper and the bank are early arrivals in any community," remarks a Minneapolis advertising man. "And their interests are identical—the upbuilding of the community. The garage, school and church may be there a little before the newspaper, but not much."

He speaks especially of the service rendered to the community by newspaper advertising, which may be no less important than publishing the news.

The Teachers' College Bulletin of Kansas, commenting on that fact, adds:

"Statistics show that more advertising is done in the United States through newspapers and magazines than by direct advertising in all its forms and by all other schemes combined. Electrical appliance companies, railroads, motion picture and automobile concerns, as well as strong financial institutions and banks, depend primarily on newspaper advertising."

"Advertisers recognize and appreciate the wide distribution which their advertisements get in the newspaper, and universally recognize the fact that they are more liable to get their message before the public in that manner than by sending a circular letter which ordinarily is tossed into the waste basket."

Cricket Hicks says after having made a trip on the Tickville train he can always tell which ear was next to the window, from the number of cinders that drop out.

Sidney Hocks says before the days of the vanity case a girl had to go to the fortune teller to find out whether she was charming or not.

Clab Hancock says he hopes the next circus that comes this way will have a palmist, as he wants to find out when Atlas Peck is going to pay him that dollar.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SOIL

I NEVER look at any soil in any part of a country without beginning to speculate or dream about what it has hidden away in a thousand mysteries.

I see the budding flower and it thrills me—but when it is in full bloom with all its glory, I wonder where it got its gorgeous colorings. I wonder how "just dirt" gave a garb so exquisite.

But nothing comes of the seed if it is merely dropped upon the ground. It must find its way deep into the soil and then sleep for quite a while. And then the awakening—to beauty and fragrance or to fruitfulness.

Your brain is soil. Your heart is soil. Your friend is what you have planted in the soil of his mind or heart. And it matters as to the beauty or greatness of that friendship. To have it beautiful and great you must plant deep. Then growth is sure to follow.

The stronger the tree, the deeper its roots. Roots must have moisture and a multitude of other things to make them bear their burden above. Soil is so friendly to that which reaches into its inner secrets. It gives the minute that a seed or sprout asks.

The deeper you plant yourself into life, the greater you become. Life is joy, trouble, worry, thrills, fears, beauty, disappointment and fulfillment. How typical the silent soil of the earth, which we tread every day, is of all that we are. What a rich, porous something is this personality of ours.

Abiding, giving out, enlarging and some times so shrinking. Sometimes wanting other elements than what it has to make it give and produce growth. Like the soil.

Nothing grows in the soil that hasn't been put there. You can't take from life what you have not put into life.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

A PLEA FOR STRENGTH

I am not certain of the right,
But clearly marked is wrong;
And so I make this prayer at night:
"Lord, help me to be strong."

I grope for truth and seek to find
Some fact amid the doubt,
But if with sin I stay behind,
All hope must flicker out.

To dare to be the thing I dream!
How easy 'tis to say!
Yet I might fight for it, and seem
Still miles and miles away.

And none can tell me shall it end
In victory or despair,
Shall I this way my spirit send?
If so, what waits me there?

Yet if, when tempted, I am weak
And into shame descend,
If only pleasure here I seek,
I know how that will end.

That way will lead me to despair,
To folly's tragic goal;
And so of that I must beware
If I would save my soul.

'Tis hard to know the path of right,
But clearly marked is wrong;
And so I make this prayer at night:
"Lord, help me to be strong."

YOUNG STUDENT BETTER

Rochester, New York, April 9.—Apparently fully recovered from an attack of amnesia, Douglas Robinson, 20-year-old Harvard student, stepped out of a hospital here this morning. Assistant Navy Secretary Douglas Robinson and his wife greeted their son.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Well, we left off in the last story just as dear Uncle Lucky picked a pretty dandelion for his buttonhole. Or was it fter Grandmother Maggie had scolded him for wearing his Sunday pants on Monday?

However, such trivial things never worried the old gentleman rabbit and in a little while, not so very long, he drew up before the Old Bramble Patch. Out he hopped in a hurry, for he had just returned from Coalville, where he had gone to buy coal from Old Miner Mole, and it had taken nearly a week to make arrangements to ship it over the Rabbitville Railroad.

No sooner did Lady Love hear the Honk! of the horn, than she opened the kitchen door to say howdy, when generous Uncle Lucky handed her a vanity bag he had bought while away. Wasn't that nice of him?

"Come out for a drive?" he asked, looking over her shoulder at the same time to see if his little bunny nephew were around. Yes, he was home, having hopped back a few minutes before with his small head full of facts about leaves and buds, learned from Professor Jim Crow.

"I'm too busy putting the winter things away in camphor balls and cedar chests," answered the little lady rabbit. But the little bunny wasn't. No, sirree, and in a few minutes he and his nice old Uncle were rolling along, over the hills and far away, as they say in Old Mother Goose.

After a while, and maybe a mile, they came to a bridge, close to which in a little house lived Old Duck Tollman, who always closed the gate until the toll money was paid. Well sir, all of a sudden something got into the Luckymobile. It kept right on going, even when the old duck tollman shouted "STOP!" and surprised Uncle Lucky slammed on the brakes and the angry tollman let down the gates!

Dear, dearest me! Of course there was a dreadful crash, and bang! cracked the lamps, and bung! went the tires on the front wheels. And, dearest me! again. What else went off? Oh, yes, oh, yes! Uncle Lucky's precious wedding stovepipe hat. Then, right away quick, the old gentleman rabbit became dreadfully angry, for if there is anything in this world he is fond of, it's that old stovepipe hat. "Look here, Old Duck Tollman!" shouted Uncle Lucky, hopping out to pick it up. "See what you've done!"

Modern mothers reject the "he-might-just-as-well-have-
it-now" theory

Many children are growing up without having had most of the so-called "children's" diseases, as a result of careful protection against contagion itself, and intelligent selection of growth foods that help to build resistance during the growth years few mothers now believe that child illnesses should be taken lightly.

Indeed, the vast majority now reject the old but harmful belief that it is a good thing to let them have the so-called "common" diseases just to get them over with.

Children during the early growth years suffer the most from child illnesses, because it is the time of greatest activity, strain and growth, and the period of least resistance.

But two measures are now known to be very effective in warding off child sickness.

One is protection against contagion itself during this period of easy susceptibility.

The other is the careful planning of child meals that increase vitality and resistance.

This is best done by including foods that are definitely known to contribute the growth and health-promoting elements that children need during the growth years.

Mother's Oats with milk are two of the most important of the few foods that contain in helpful amounts the one element in food that children during the growth years need the most, the indispensable tissue-forming protein.

A cup of each supplies 23% or nearly one-fourth of the growing child's daily requirement of this important body-building material.

The picture of a mother on the package of oats that you get at the store is the trademark of the careful millers of Mother's Oats.

Indeed, these earnest millers have worked more than 50 years to make this friendly brand the most wholesome and nourishing of all the breakfast oats for growing children.

Scenario by Dorothy Farnum from the novel by VICENTE BLASCO IBANEZ.
Titles by Katharine Hilliker and H. H. Caldwell.

THE same sweeping human passions which gave "The Four Horsemen" its phenomenal success, are now in this colossal epic of the screen, made from Blasco Ibanez' greatest story. Tremendous, awe-inspiring, the coming of the torrent furnishes the most thrilling climax you've ever seen in this colorful tale of a woman who had everything except love.
